

RAMSEY --

This is PRECISELY the same material we saw before, and with only MINOR changes in the prose. There is some reorganization; Maurice's garbage is stuck in between paras 1 & 2 of old "introduction", and simply photographed. Next four pages STILL tell reader what he did, and why (the part John H. said he refused to read beyond). Next four pages ("Foreign Reactions") are an edited version of old "Initial Reactions" which I always thought was easily coordinat-able. Next six pages are ~~a~~ the old "New Elements" section re-titled "Impact on Policies Abroad" (most are cut-and-paste photographs of original version). These pages are (1) a gross duplication of our likely responses section, and make us all look bad if the two papers are meant to be in any way complimentary.; and (2) interrupt the otherwise sensible flow of this paper. Concluding 3 pages get back on the track of summarizing what the country studies say; my few specific suggestions are pencilled in.

In short, I STRONGLY suggest: Eliminate opening paragraph and from bottom of page three through page six/ (what we have done and why we did it) as well as pages 11-16 (duplicate estimate). There then would be a very neat summary to the country studies, with the following organization: Conclusions; Foreign Reactions; Impact on Foreign Economies. They might want to add another section on "Counteractions", to make the summary conform better with the country studies.

STAT

STAT

Approved For Release 2005/06/06 : CIA-RDP79R01095A001200030010-5

Next 18 Page(s) In Document Exempt

Approved For Release 2005/06/06 : CIA-RDP79R01095A001200030010-5